Comments on Maps received from [REDACTED]

Since all of these maps are unclassified and are the actual street maps of Tientsin, Peiping and Shanghai they are all useful in the debriefing of people who have been to China recently. Also it appears that the oldest of these maps is about 1956, which brings our street maps of these three places pretty much up to date.

Maps D(H421.9-4) PEIPING: Peiping City Street Map, D(H421.9-4) PEIPING: Bus and Street Car Route Map of Peiping and Tourist Map of Peking have proved extremely helpful. Maps D(H421.9-4) PEIPING: Peiping City Street Map and D(H421.9-4) PEIPING: Bus and Street Car Route Map of Peiping <sup>are</sup> the Chinese version of the Tourist Map of Peiping which is in English. In the case of the Peiping maps we are now adding [REDACTED] the map in either Chinese or English and he can determine the correct place on the Chinese version of the map and then indicate it on the English version which will enable [REDACTED] to get the correct spelling etc.

D(H421.9-4) TIENTSIN: City Area Map of Tientsin is also a tourist map of Tientsin in Chinese. If at anytime the English version of this map is obtained it could be used in the same manner as the Peiping ~~map~~ tourist maps. The map of Shanghai, in Chinese, is a very clear street map of the city, however, if an English version of a ~~XXXX~~ street map or tourist map is available it would be a very useful supplement to the map we received.
